With creative joy – and a dash of inspired madness – we have now taken a Norwegian designer product out into the world

Husband and wife Sonja Djønné and Thoralf Lian established Heymat in 2016. They aimed to supply decorative designer mats with the same practical qualities as industrial mats to the home interior market.

The inspiration behind the company was an everyday situation that will be familiar to many of us. In Sonja and Thoralf's home, the entrance hall was always littered with shoes and children's boots covered in sand and mud. But since their family business was in cleaning and hiring out industrial mats, they had a solution to the problem: a mat that absorbed all dirt and made it possible to keep the entrance clean and tidy. The mat was not beautiful in itself, but it sparked the idea to develop mats that can be decorative as well as functional.

The couple already had in-depth knowledge of industrial mats. Thoralf's family had run a laundry for three generations, and their activities included cleaning and hiring out mats to business and industry customers. These mats were very hard-wearing and functional, but their appearance was not attractive enough to make people want them in their home.

This is where the company benefitted from Sonja's enthusiasm for interior design, and Heymat began to take shape in this convergence between experience and passion. From the first collection, all Heymat products were developed in cooperation with some of Norway's top designers and with a constant focus on sustainability throughout the process – from the use of recycled materials to the creation of mats that will be used for a very long time.

For us, sustainability is about three things: materials, durability and quality. Three factors that are closely interlinked, each of which affects the others

Recycled materials

In 2017, we replaced nylon with recycled PET in our products. PET is a durable material that is perfect for doormats. It has great absorption properties and dries quickly.

PET is made from recycled plastic bottles – an important environmental choice that feels right for us. Reusing materials and components is vital if we are to achieve a more circular and sustainable manufacturing process

Premium quality

We want our mats to live, function and inspire for many years. That is why we never compromise on quality. A Heymat also helps to extend the quality and lifespan of other flooring and surfaces in the home, by quickly absorbing dirt and grit, preventing it from being dragged into the house

Long lifespan

Sustainability is also about developing motifs that stand the test of time. This is something that is the key to smart, functional and sustainable products. Our design processes take time, because we test and tweak our products to make sure that they will work, not just for one season, but to be something that you can keep for a long time

Grain

With its unique organic design,
Grain adds texture and colour
to the room

Meet Stine – the designer behind Grain

From Kiosken Studio in Bergen, Stine Aas works on furniture and product design. Taking her inspiration from different floors and architectural materials with rough textures, Stine has created a collection that will add texture to modern interior design

”I think that we have come up with a design that adds something new to Heymat’s product range”

STINE AAS

Tell us about Grain

Grain is a mat with an organic pattern inspired by stone textures, and it can evoke associations of things close up or something viewed from a great distance. The mats consist of unique shapes that give a modern look and effectively hide dirt and dust

What inspired the design?

The design developed from an idea where the focus was on pattern and texture rather than on a typical motif. I was inspired by different floors and architectural materials that had rough textures.

I began a research process in which I photographed materials and stone surfaces whose surfaces I liked, before transferring them by hand and developing them into a pattern that formed the basis for Grain.

It was the rhythm and abstract shapes of the photographs that formed the basis for the pattern, which appears repetitive but free, as no two shapes are identical – as in nature.

What is your favourite thing about working as a designer?

I enjoy the variety of my work, I’m never bored. Each project brings new things to explore, learn and test. I love the process and the thrill of seeing a completed piece of work. The creative process makes me feel that anything is possible.

What inspires you?

I’m inspired by working on something. I have a lot of projects at the back of my mind and find inspiration for them everywhere. In the street, when I shop, in nature.

What homes do you imagine Grain would suit?

I envision that Grain would suit a young home where the mat would add texture to a modern interior design style

The Dis collection is growing with the addition of several new formats

”Expanding with a series of bigger dimensions felt like a natural progression for a collection inspired by nature’s vast landscapes. The soft blending hues of Dis can now be enjoyed on a larger scale, like a panorama fading towards the horizon”

Mix Teklan - Earth tone pastels that welcome you home

One of our first and most popular collections Mix, designed by Kristine Five Melvær, was first launched in 2016. Mix has now been presented in a brand-new edition, created by Tekla Evelina Severin, better known as Teklan. With a nod to 70's color palette, gemstones and the Mediterranean, Tekla has created a contemporary color scheme in earthy pastels that welcome you home.

For Tekla Evelina Severin, it was important to show her appreciation for the original design in her new creation, contributing something new in her personal interpretation

"I wanted to create a new version of Mix that feels harmonic and inspiring to come home to. I drew great inspiration from the soft and almost meditative color scale of gemstones," says Tekla Evelina Severin.

NYCXDESIGN AWARD 2021

Mix Teklan was named the winner in the Residential Flooring category at the prestigious NYCxDESIGN Awards 2021, one of the premier design competitions in the United States

Each Heymat has a unique identity and story embedded
